

BLOODHOUNDS TO TRAIL GIRL WHO IS LOST IN WOODS

School Teacher, Her Nerves Worn Out
From Overwork, Wanders Into Forest During Storm, and Has Not Been Seen Since.

The hundreds of summer visitors, aided by Sheriff's deputies, who are searching for Miss Agnes Maguire, a Brooklyn public school teacher, at Nolan's Point, Lake Hopatcong, believe she wandered into the dense woods Saturday night to escape the heavy downpour of rain. The young woman was at the lake resort resting after a hard year's work at her school. Miss Maguire is said to have been a nervous wreck, and the authorities are inclined to believe that the storm and thunder of Saturday night temporarily deranged her mind.

Charles Maguire, a clerk in the Post-Office at Dover, N. J., and cousin of the missing girl, who had driven her in a buggy to the spot from which she disappeared, is leading a party of watchers through the woods and swampy ground near Camp Look-Who's-Here.

To Use Hounds.
Bloodhounds have been telegraphed for, and will be put on the trail to-day. Dynamite will be exploded into the lake to bring up the body, if the school teacher is drowned.

Not even a footprint was found to indicate which direction was taken by Miss Maguire. The lake in the vicinity of the place where the pretty school teacher disappeared has been dragged, with no result. This strengthens the Sheriff's theory that the girl is in the woods.

Charles Maguire had been spending a vacation at Camp Look, and asked his cousin to drive there with him Saturday evening to get a suit case he had left. Just as they reached a point near the summer cottage which was their destination, a heavy rainstorm overtook them, and as a steep declivity prevented their driving nearer than the road to the cottage, young Maguire decided to wait until the rain let up. He was gone five minutes, and when he returned found that his cousin was not in the buggy.

Girl Had Disappeared.
He shouted between thunder claps, but got no response. After running frantically about the road for quite a distance and penetrating the woods as far as he dared, he decided she had become frightened and attempted to find the cottage, and went there again. She was not about, and, after he had aroused the whole camp and scores of men had scoured the woods in every direction, they were still without a clue. There were no footprints about the buggy to indicate that the young lady did not leave of her own accord.

By dawn yesterday the searchers had been augmented by scores of men from every quarter. The woods were searched, but not a trace was discovered. Only one clue was found. A guest at Edward W. Kilpatrick's camp told the searchers the light from his cottage window was shining in such a way that he could see across the road, and that he saw Maguire tie up the horse. A short time after the young man left, he declares, the young woman stepped from the vehicle and ran down the hill in the direction he had gone, as if she had become frightened and tried to follow him.

No Trace Is Found.
The heavy rain obliterated all tracks that might have been made, however, and this clue was of little help to the searchers.
It thought last night that another clue had been found when two colored men were said to have met a young woman about 7 o'clock yesterday morning who asked them if they could direct her to a place to stay. When one of the men was found, however, it was discovered the woman whom they were looking for, with a black hat, while Miss Maguire wore grey and was bareheaded.
Miss Maguire, twenty-seven years old, formerly taught in public school No. 55, in Degraw street, Brooklyn, but her health failing last February she was forced to give up her place. On Thursday she and her father, John Maguire, a tea merchant living at No. 2 Second place, and her mother, went to visit Bernard Maguire, her uncle, at Marysville, just outside of Dover. Her father returned to Brooklyn that evening.

Yesterday the father received a telegram from his wife stating that his daughter was very ill. He left immediately with his youngest daughter and learned for the first time when he reached there that Agnes was missing. It seems to be the belief of her parents.

RENTS, because of her illness and nervous condition, that she became crazed from fright during the storm and wandered away. She has been prominent in amateur dramatic circles in Brooklyn and also in the work of St. Stephen's Roman Catholic Church.
There are several abandoned shafts of old iron mines near Hurdstown, north of the lake, and some are of the opinion that Miss Maguire wandered to one of the unprotected shafts and fell to her death.

Released on Bail on Children's Charge, He Fired Load of Shot Into His Heart.
PHILADELPHIA, N. J., Aug. 25.—Brooding over his disgrace for having been arrested on a serious charge, Charles Howey, a farmer, living near here, committed suicide yesterday by shooting. Last week Howey was arrested and confessed to having attacked two small children in his wagon. He was sent to jail, but on Saturday bail was furnished and he went to his home.

Yesterday afternoon he pretended to be cleaning a shotgun, but when his wife's back was turned he tried a string about the trigger and slipping the other end of the string around his foot, discharged the weapon. The charge entered his heart.
Howey, who was forty-six years old, was a prosperous farmer and had been looking for a new home in one of the county's best citizens.

Alfred Ellisworth, fifty-four years old, of No. 26 West Sixty-sixth street, fell down a flight of stairs at his home to-day and broke his neck. He died instantly. He had stepped into a store room in the hallway of the flat house, and in leaving it backed down the stairway, falling the depth of the flight and striking on his head. He was employed as a waiter in a downtown restaurant and lived in a small apartment in the Sixty-sixth street house with his wife.

JUSTICE GAYNOR SAYS BETTING IS NOT GAMBLING

Says Ladies Can Wager
Gloves Without Violating Provisions of Penal Code.

DISCUSSES DISC GAME.

Says Millions of People Have Erroneous Idea as to What Constitutes an Offense.

late Division, Supreme Court, Brooklyn, to-day came in from his country place at St. James, L. I., to hear Albert Langfeldt's application for a stay of the order which vacated the stay on an injunction restraining the police from interfering with Langfeldt's "disc game" at Coney Island. This legal snarl is better known as the Justice Gaynor Justice Dickey mix-up, the lower court Justice Dickey refusing to allow Justice Gaynor to act as a whole Appellate Division.

Justice Dickey had taken the police aside, while Justice Gaynor, noted for his injunctions against the police, had accepted the plea of Langfeldt's counsel that the game is not gambling. Justice Gaynor announced that assuming Justice Dickey was right the Appellate Division Justice had the right to grant a stay. He then listened to Lawyer Cameron's glowing description of the harmless and athletic qualities of his client's game. According to Lawyer Cameron it was much "like quarts or horsehoes."

He said: "Millions of people think to make bets is unlawful. If two ladies bet a pair of gloves, people say it is unlawful. Let us go through the Penal Code and there is nothing to show that betting is a crime. The whole question here is the doubt that this is a gambling game."

Decision was reserved.
Following a mixed start to-day, stocks took a downward turn and on a gradual rally a company of strength was made in the afternoon and the principal stocks were quoted at the highest. Manhattan got 3-1/4 above last week's closing, Smelling 2-3/4, Delaware and Hudson 2-1/8, Reading and Westinghouse Electric 2, Amalgamated Copper 1-1/2 and Atchafalaya, Erie first preferred, Brooklyn Transit, Central Railroad, Third Avenue broke and sold at 50, a loss of 7-1/4. Business was not animated.

The feeling was more confident over the money outlook and was enhanced by the fact that the New York City bond issue would be sold at 100, a gain of 1/2, and thus assured a success.
